WOMEN FOR WOMEN
POLITICAL PRISONERS
JERUSALEM

SEMI-ANNUAL REPORT
JANUARY – JUNE 1990

WOFPP, P.O.B. 8537
JERUSALEM, 91083 ISRAEL
LIST OF TERMS

Shabak — Hebrew acronym for General Security Services.

Hazana (closet) — A bad smelling cell measuring about 100x80 cm, where there is no possibility to stand upright or to straighten the legs while sitting. Sometimes the detainee's hands and legs are tied. The detainee is not permitted to leave to use the toilet or to wash. Those remaining for long periods receive a quarter of a loaf of bread stuffed with spoiled food.

Shabah — A filthy opaque sack placed over the detainee's head. The suspect's hands are tied either to a railing behind her back or above her head.

Zinzana (lock-up) — Solitary confinement in a dark cell 1x1.5 meters, with or without running water.
RESPONSES TO THE WOFPP BOOKLET 1989

The booklet which "Women for Women Political Prisoners — Jerusalem" published in December 1989 (under the name of "Women for Support of Women Political Prisoners") on the detention center in the Russian Compound in Jerusalem (the Moscobiye) drew a wide range of responses. Many requests arrived for the purchase of additional copies and several people sought more information on the subject. Others sent letters of encouragement and some joined our group. Considering the group's limited ability to distribute the booklet, we attribute special importance to the responses which appeared in the Israeli press.

One of our aims is to inform the wider public on the conditions at the detention center and to arouse it to respond to the cries of injustice, cruelty and arbitrariness from within the walls of the detention cells of the Russian Compound. The following brief summary of items which appeared in the press indicates that the booklet succeeded in disturbing the complacency of the public and in raising demands for a response from the police and the Shabak to the accusations lodged.

Yoram Levi's article (Davar, 26 January, 1990) unleashed a wave of responses to the publication of the booklet. The article cites four of the nine testimonies included in the booklet and includes the responses of the spokesperson of the Southern District of the Jerusalem Police. He states, among other things, "The detention center is under the constant supervision of external public bodies, like the Committee of the Knesset, Members of Knesset, the Red Cross and others, in addition to the internal police review. All inspections praised the high standards of maintenance, food and medical treatment received by the detainees".

The statement of the police spokesperson did not convince S. Yizhar, a renowned Israeli author, who, in his earlier short stories, exposed wrongs committed against the Palestinians forty years ago. In relating to the methods of interrogation and torture described by WOFPP, Yizhar appeals to the Shabak interrogator and demands, "And if nonetheless, all of this is true, whereas a non-refutal may be construed as an admission, in whose name do you perpetrate these acts? And if indeed all of this is true — how does the earth support you?" (Davar, 2 February, 1990).

Journalist Yossi Dahan, under the headline "Let the Minister of Police and the Prime Minister Step Forward to Deny," also states, "We are not speaking here of individual cases considered deviations from accepted procedure. We speak here of an entire network for which breaking the law has become the norm. The daily infliction of injury to the bodies and to the dignity of these women has become an acceptable work method. Torture, humiliation and cruel punishment have come to replace fair legal procedure" (Hadashot, 18 February, 1990). Therefore Dahan demands, if no denial is forthcoming, "A public investigation commission should be established to find out what transpires behind the steel doors of the Russian Compound, and the perpetrators of these crimes should be prosecuted and punished... Women for Women Political Prisoners has presented us with the facts to ensure that we will not be able to evade the issue in the future by claiming "We didn't act because we didn't know"."

Following the appeals of journalists, the Prime Minister's Military Advisor Uzi Nevo was forced (Kol Hair, 23 February, 1990) to acknowledge the existence of so-called "waiting cells" (zinzanas) in the Shabak interrogation facilities, but denied the existence of "narrow boxes" popularly termed by the women detainees and in the WOFPP booklet hazanas (closets) in which detainees are held for long periods, standing or in fetal position, to elicit a break-down or a confession.

It is not unwarranted to assume that the decision of a Knesset delegation to visit the Russian Compound on 26 February, 1990, was prompted by these publications. These MKs, whose request to visit the Shabak wing was denied, were amazed at what they saw during their guided visit, and summed up the visit with one word — "shocking".

The reactions to the booklet reached a peak with the response of MK (Labour) Shevach Weiss, who was deeply shocked by the testimonies. He wrote to the Prime Minister, who is ministerially responsible for the Shabak that he does not believe that such sadists exist within the ranks of the Security Service, and even if part of what was reported is true, those responsible should be prosecuted. Following his appeal, MK Weiss was invited to meet with senior members of the Security Service and was taken on a guided tour of the facilities which were made ready for his visit. He saw clean, whitewashed cells, met with happy detainees and was promised that any time an interrogator decides to slap a woman detainee he must first obtain personal permission from his superiors. The MK was, of course, assured that in treatment of the women detainees care is taken to fully comply with religious rules, that no interrogation takes place without the presence of a policewoman, and that no physical violence is used against women. It was further explained to him that all claims of torture were refuted in interim trials*, and that two interrogators were dismissed for deviations from the norm in order to uphold the high standards of the Services.

The testimony of Weiss which whitewashed the Shabak was met with derision by Silvie Keshet (Yedioth Achronot, 9 March, 1990) and Gabi Nitzan (Hadashot, 13 March, 1990). In the weekend supplement of the local weekly “Jerusalem” on 9 March, 1990, Yehoyakim Stein from the “Public Committee Against Torture in Israel” and Michel Warschawski, who personally underwent Shabak interrogations at the Russian Compound, responded to the ingratiation MK. On 16 March MK Weiss reiterated and reconfirmed his faith in the Shabak’s decency, rejecting the criticism his remarks drew. This is the state of things until the present; testimonies of hundreds of detainees against the “word of honor” of anonymous Shabak personnel to an ingratiating member of Knesset.

In summary, the booklet aroused public awareness and criticism of the conditions at the Russian Compound. This pressure, however, is insufficient to change the methods of interrogation, to cause the establishment of an investigation commission, or to mandate real public supervision of the conditions in the detention center at the Russian Compound.

* An interim trial may be requested by a defendant — prior to the commencement of the trial proper — to establish the admissibility of evidence i.e. a confession extracted under torture.
WOMEN DETAINNEES AT THE RUSSIAN COMPOUND —
CONDITIONS OF DETENTION AND INTERROGATION

Between January and June 1990 we were informed of 87 cases of women held in the detention center at the Russian Compound for various periods of time. This number does not include those arrested or detained for interrogation and released within 24 hours (for example many girls, teenagers and women from Tzur Baher, who were brought in recently, to the detention center, for a few hours for questioning).

Of those detained at the Russian Compound in the last six months, 55 were under the age of 18.

Of the 87 women arrested, 36 were released (most of them on bail) and so far they have not been charged. 18 stood trial and were sentenced to prison terms. Among these 14 are still serving time in prison, 4 were released after completing their sentences.

2 underwent trial and were acquitted.
11 are awaiting trial.

The testimonies of the detainees who were interrogated at the Shabak wing present an identical picture to that described in the WOFPP booklet in December 1989: the conditions of solitary confinement, the filthy and inedible food, deficient medical treatment, the beatings, the sexual harassment and threats of rape — all of these are recurring themes in the women’s testimonies. Especially consistent are the descriptions of the methods of torture regularly used by the Shabak interrogators — the shabah, the hazana (closet) and the zinzana (lock-up).

Neither have conditions improved in the detention cells of the regular police wing in recent months. From testimonies we gathered, most blatant are the occurrences of harassment and humiliations by some of the policemen and policewomen who beat, abuse and disgrace the women detainees at their pleasure with no one supervising, restraining or punishing their behavior.

A hunger strike in the wing of the women detainees at the Russiav Compound is not an everyday occurrence. The detainees’ stay is temporary, the turnover is high, many of the detainees are minors who lack experience and do not know how to defend their rights and many of them are exhausted after prolonged periods in the Shabak wing. The outbreak of a hunger strike means that the conditions and the treatment have become unbearable. Experience has shown that temporary improvement in the conditions of detention follows such struggles, yet such improvements do not last. It is therefore necessary to be on guard at all times.

On 25 March, the women incarcerated in the cell (5 minors and 2 adults) began a hunger strike. The strike began during the month of Ramadan (a month-long Muslim holiday in which believers fast during the daytime) after their demand to meet with the commander of the detention center was refused. The women detainees demanded the cessation of the endless torment of one of the women detainees by the police, an end to the imposition of collective punishments, permission for family visits in the morning hours during the month of Ramadan and permission to receive regular medical treatment.

The response of the detention center authorities to the strike was: the removal of all belongings from the cell, including mattresses, blankets, washing utensils and toilet paper for long hours, the cancellation of family visits and prohibition of the reception of parcels. Later in the hunger strike the women were transferred into one cell and ordered to undress for a search. When they refused to do so they were threatened that they would be forcibly undressed. Only then did they agree to remove their clothes and thus remained totally naked. After exhausting negotiations the commander of the detention center met with the strikers and accepted their demand to alter family visiting hours during Ramadan. The commander promised to review their complaints, and the women ended their strike.

A month later, on 26 May, the women detainees began yet another hunger strike, this time for only one day. They protested the prohibition of conversation in the dining room during meals, demanded protection from the criminal women detainees in the cell adjacent to theirs, and protested against the aggressive and humiliating treatment by the policemen and policewomen. The deputy detention center commander, who met with the hunger strikers, promised to comply with their demands.

The recurring hunger strikes attest to the fact that not only have the conditions of detention not improved, they have, in fact, worsened.

It is worthy to note a few technical and organizational improvements introduced during recent months in the detention center which can, to some extent, be attributed to WOFPP activities:

- A shed was erected and benches installed for the convenience of the families waiting to visit their loved ones. Over a year ago WOFPP brought the lack of adequate waiting facilities to the attention of City Council members, and also raised this issue with the Deputy Police Commander of the Jerusalem Region, the Commander of the Detention Center at the Russian Compound and senior officers.

- An alteration in the visitation arrangements: a regular visitation day was set for every detainee who is entitled to meet with his/her family members and the family then was notified. This arrangement enables the distribution of visits at the detention center over most weekdays, whereas in the past all visits took place on Friday only and then for a limited number of hours. Consequently many families did not have the opportunity to visit with their detained relatives.

- A canteen was opened in the detention center where the families can purchase on the premises various consumer goods - previously forbidden — and pass them on to the detainees. Before the canteen opened, the transfer of parcels to the detainees was subject to random approval by the policeman on duty. Since the canteen opened, WOFPP has been engaged in prolonged correspondence with its managers and has raised two demands:

A. To require the canteen to give receipts for payment of goods transferred directly to the detainees.

B. To include among the canteen goods cheaper products also (for example, the only toothpaste sold is an imported brand and the shampoo and sanitary napkins are of an expensive variety).
WOFPP ACTIVITY

JANUARY TO JUNE 1990

The activities of WOFPP continued in the framework set during the group's first year. These include:

- Daily visits to the Russian Compound to meet with the families of detainees and to gather information about new cases which have not yet come to our attention and about detainees who are held in the zinzana in the Shabak wing.
- Bi-weekly visits by the WOFPP lawyer to the detention center at the Russian Compound for on-going follow up with the women detainees. During these visits the legal counselor also receives testinomies and affidavits from women who were beaten, humiliated, subjected to threats or prevented from exercising their legal rights — at any time during their arrest, interrogation or detention, and from women whose circumstances or conditions of detention require immediate intervention.
- The filing of complaints by the WOFPP lawyer with the detention center authorities in matters pertaining to certain women detainees or in a matter which concerns all of the women detainees. From January to June 1990 seven complaints were filed in matters pertaining to five women detainees. Not one of these complaints has thus far gained consideration (we have no systematic information on complaints filed by other attorneys representing detainees). There are women who fear that filing a complaint against the authorities may do them more harm than good, and that instead of the cessation of mistreatment it would be further aggravated.
- Attendance at the courts during the trials of women detainees. For many months we were prevented from entering the military Court in Ramallah where trials of West Bank residents are held. After a protracted correspondence with the military authorities demanding to exercise the legal right of every citizen to attend the court proceedings, we ensured our right to be present as observers.
- When a case of gross breach of human rights comes to our attention, or a case which requires immediate intervention to prevent danger to the life of a detainee, we bring it to the attention of the media in order to enlist wide coverage of the case. We also call upon bodies which deal with the protection of civil rights both in Israel and abroad, to intervene. Not all the information we forward to the press is published. From January to June 1990 the following items were published at our instigation:
  A. Salwa Hodla Barghouthi on 22 December 1989.
  B. The complaint of S.S. was published on 27 March 1990.
  C. The hunger strike was publicized on 27 March 1990.
  D. The item about the methods of torture used during interrogation of three women detainees was published on 8 June 1990.

During the period from January to June 1990 we applied to various bodies abroad to request their intervention on behalf of Ismahan Alwana from the village of Jaba'. The Methodist Church in the U.S. launched a campaign to sign a petition on her behalf which was forwarded to the President of Israel.

- In January 1990 the Public Committee Against Torture in Israel was founded. We bring to its attention testimonies and affidavits of women detainees who were tortured and harassed during interrogation, at the time of their arrest and while incarcerated.

- Visits with released women detainees (on bail, awaiting trial or after serving their sentence). These visits are held to express our solidarity and also in order to complete our information about conditions of arrest and detention.

- We continue to forward weekly parcels to the women detainees at the Russian Compound. They contain sheets, towels, underwear and also food, soap, toilet paper and sanitary pads which we are now able to purchase at the canteen.

- On International Prisoner Day we held a protest vigil in front of the detention center at the Russian Compound.

- Recently we began to sponsor Victoria David, a Jewish political prisoner who has no relatives in Israel. We share the cost of providing goods from the prison canteen, take turns visiting her and exert pressure on the authorities to have her transferred from Neve Tirza prison (where criminal women prisoners are incarcerated) to the Sharon Prison where the political prisoners are held. Victoria David's request to be with other women political prisoners was not granted, like the request of the prisoners of "Hanitzotz" which was not granted at the time, due to care taken by the authorities to separate the Jewish and Palestinian political prisoners.

In his reply to the application of Victoria's attorney, the Commander of the Central Division wrote: "1. In the Sharon Prison women minority (our emphasis) prisoners are incarcerated and are serving sentences for crimes against the security of the State. 2. Since your client does not meet all these criteria, her place of incarceration has been set at the Neve Tirza Prison".
TESTIMONIES

TESTIMONY OF G.E.A.

27 years old, a nurse working in Saudi Arabia. Arrived for a visit at her parents’ home in Deheisheh Camp on the occasion of her mother’s death.

I was arrested in my family’s home in Deheisheh at midnight of 16 April 1990. A curfew was imposed on the camp and the Shabak officers, accompanied by about 20 policemen, entered the house, blindfolded me, and dragged me to the vehicle. I was driven to the military governor’s house in Bethlehem, where they put a shabah on my head, and after about two hours I was transferred to the Russian Compound.

After a body search, I was transferred to zinzana no. 13, the size of which is 1.10x2.50 meters. A hole in the floor served as a toilet, and the faucet dripped constantly, day and night, making everything very wet. There were many flies, a heavy stink, smelly blankets, and no ventilation. The light in the zinzana was on constantly, day and night. Policemen and interrogators would occasionally knock with keys on the door, and bother me with questions and comments, preventing me from sleeping.

When I was taken from the zinzana for interrogation, a sack was placed over my head and I was roughly dragged by the cord of the sack, which caused me to bump into the walls, and be bruised. This is common practice. I was in the shabah for a day and a half, standing the entire time, with one hand handcuffed to the pipe. The interrogators would extinguish cigarettes on my arm.

After spending 25 days in zinzanas and after I admitted to some of the accusations, I was transferred to a cell in the regular wing. I slept on the floor, since the sleeping benches were occupied. At night the policemen used to enter the cells, kick the women sleeping on the floors, and swear and curse. The Jewish criminal detainees in the adjacent cell used foul language and cursed the political detainees, while the policemen and policewomen allowed them to do anything they wished.

TESTIMONY OF MAYSOON

Maysoon (not her real name) is a minor 15 years old, an eighth grade student. Arrested at the Dahariya Junction on 16 April on suspicion of throwing stones.

I spent one day in the zinzana. During interrogation, one of the interrogators tried to break my finger. Afterward, I was transferred to a regular cell. I was subjected to frequent beatings by policemen and policewomen. About a month after my arrest, during a daily walk outside, a policeman noticed me talking with one of the detainees. Policewoman Dalila and policeman Motti took me to the room where we meet with our attorneys, demanded that I lift my hands, and Motti beat me. From there I was taken to the dining room, where policewoman Vared hit me on my left hand with a large and heavy key. In addition to being subjected to frequent beatings, I was forbidden to use the canteen, and visits from my family were cancelled.

TESTIMONY OF N.D.H.

Nineteen years old, from Kalandia. Detained on 1 May, 1990 on the Allenby Bridge, on her way home from a visit to Jordan.

I was brought from the bridge to the Russian Compound, my hands and feet were bound and my head placed within a sack.

I was held in the interrogation wing for 21 days, in several zinzanas (nos. 5, 4, and 13) of various sizes. One of them was 2x2.5 meters high, with a hermetically sealed steel door which has a small opening which is also hermetically sealed from outside. There was a small hole in the ceiling, closed as well. A strong yellow light was on in the zinzana at all hours of the day and night. In the zinzana’s floor, there was a hole for a toilet.

There are zinzanas without running water, where the detainees receive water in bottles. I received two bottles, one for washing, and one for drinking. There were days when I received only one bottle. The quantity of water was subject to the arbitrary decision of the guard. The mattress and blankets in the zinzana stunk and the floors were covered with food remain and insects.

During interrogation, the interrogators pushed me roughly against the wall, and my head was bruised. The interrogator spat in my face and stepped on my feet. About 10 days after my arrest, my head was covered by shabah for about two hours. Afterwards, I was placed in the hazana, with my hands tied behind my back. The hazana, 70cm x 70cm in size and about two meters high, is totally dark and stinks strongly of animal carcasses. I was held in the hazana for a whole night, with my hands tied behind my back.

TESTIMONY OF A.M.J.

Below is a translation of an affidavit by A.M.J., of Beit Anan, delivered under oath on 26 March 1990 to attorney Ahlam Haddad.

1. I am 23 years old. I was arrested on Saturday 4 March 1990, at 1:00 a.m. I was brought to the detention center at Beitunia. From there I was transferred to the Military Government Compound and later to the Russian Compound. I was accompanied by Secret Service officers and military officials.

2. In the Russian Compound I was placed in zinzana. In the morning they began to interrogate me. A shabah was placed on me, that is, a sack covered my head, and my hands were cuffed behind my back. I was laid out on cold water, and was kept thus throughout the interrogation, which continued for four whole days.

3. The treatment in the zinzana was very bad. They used to curse me all the time. I remained 18 days in the zinzana, and later my detention was extended by 50 days.

4. They extracted a confession from me by means of collaborators (termed by Palestinians "birds")

5. We all suffer — I and my young friends at the detention center in the Russian Compound — from collective punishments such as ignoring our requests to see a doctor, the confiscation of mattresses and sheets, thus leaving us to sleep on the floor. A policewoman called Ruhama beat me when I was in the room and cursed me calling me a "sharmut" (Arabic meaning whore). A policeman came and dragged me outside the room, and the policewoman pulled my hair. The policeman disengaged her from me. I was taken by myself into the attorneys' waiting room, and later, when the rest of the girls protested my removal from the room, they brought them as well. We remained there for a few hours. This was Friday night.

6. We appeal to all the forces of peace all over the world. We began a hunger strike for the following reasons:

   a. We requested to meet with the commanding officer at the detention center and our request was denied.

   b. We requested an improvement in the manner policemen and policewomen treat us and the cessation of the curses shouted at us all day.

   c. Our sheets, clothes, and canteen privileges were taken from us, and now we sit on the cold floor in a very cold and damp room where there is never any sunlight.

   d. Because of our refusal to eat, policewoman Dalia, policeman Uzi, and another officer entered the women detainees' room, took all of us out, brought us all into the attorneys' waiting room, and then Dalia ordered that we undress for a body search. We were forced to stand facing the wall and to remove all of our clothes. After being threatened, we removed all our clothes and remained totally naked.

   e. We demand the cessation of vengeful maltreatment of the detainee S.S. and her persistent, almost daily, harassment, especially during the night.

We request here from the democratic forces to gain freedom and to improve the conditions of detention at the Russian Compound.

TESTIMONY OF SALWA HODLA BARGHOUTHI

The following is a translation of the sworn affidavit of Salwa Ahmad Hodla Barghouthi, 29 years old, from Beit Rima, in the Ramallah region. The affidavit was taken on 28 December 1989 in the Detention Center at the Russian Compound by attorney Ahlam Haddad.

1. I was arrested on Friday 8 December 1989 at the Allenby Bridge, upon returning from Jordan, and was transferred to the Russian Compound. I was not interrogated that day, nor the following day, Saturday. The interrogation began on Sunday, 12 December, and from that day onwards I stayed in the zinzana for 22 days.

2. An interrogator known as Avi al-Assad began to interrogate me for three days.

3. An interrogator known as Roni hit me on the head. He used to begin the interrogation in the afternoon and would continue well into the night, and then take me out to the yard. In the yard, I was ordered to raise my hands, to remove my outer clothing and my head covering, and I was left in the cold for about four hours. They did this twice.

4. During this period I began to menstruate. I did not have sanitary pads, and all my clothing was soaked and covered with blood. Throughout this time I was in interrogation, and even now, I am sick from the fear and the beatings and am currently taking medications.

5. I was placed in the zinzana, which had a strong bad smell. It had no water and I could not eat in there. This continued throughout the interrogation.

6. I was also placed in a dark zinzana for five hours, and I slept on the floor without a blanket. Before they took me in, I was told I was entering "a grave".

7. They humiliated me and cursed me, especially the interrogator Roni, who told me, among other things, "Hey, sharmuta" (whore) and "I know how many pubic hairs you have".

8. Roni threatened me that he would sleep with me and remove my clothes. He told me, "I want to screw you".

9. During the interrogation, upon completion of the session, I was left alone on the chair while the air-conditioner was turned on. One night I slept seated on the chair, and one night I slept like this on the floor.

10. I have not yet met with an attorney for consultation on legal matters concerning the interrogation methods I was subjected to, and on my detention in general.

Following the interrogation, Salwa Barghouthi signed a statement in Hebrew, none of which she understood.

TESTIMONY OF ITAFF

Itaff (not her real name), a 15-year-old high school pupil from Shuafat refugee camp, was arrested on 26 February 1990 upon leaving her school in Sheikh Jarrah. She was arrested on the suspicion of throwing stones at a no. 27 Israeli bus.

In the car that took me to the Russian Compound, they all slapped my face, spat on me, cursed me, and threatened to hit me and to detain me for a long period. When I arrived at the Russian Compound, the interrogator thrust my head against the wall and threatened to abuse me sexually.

Afterwards, I was placed in a filthy cell. There, I was held without food or water until noon the following day. On the following day, the threats and beatings continued. I was beaten in the face, and policemen pulled at my long hair. The man who photographed me (for the police files) hit me on my feet, face, and eyes, and on my back and neck.

On 2 March, I was taken out to the yard, in the rain and cold, for half an hour. Since then, I have been coughing. That day, at about four o'clock, I was taken by a policewoman and two policemen to the attorneys' waiting room. There, I was again hit by a policeman, especially on the ear. The three pulled at my hair and cursed me. The policeman who beat me threatened to tie me up and hang me from the lamp.

Attorney Haddad saw me again in the courtroom, where I told her that after she concluded her visit with me on 2 March, the beatings continued until evening. I was injured in the leg, but the beatings continued on the injured foot as well.

I stopped going out to eat, I was detained in a separate cell, and I suffered from pains and stomach problems. I lost weight and my physical condition has deteriorated.

Following Itaff's testimony, attorney Ahlam Haddad lodged a complaint on 15 March with the director of the detention center in Jerusalem. She demanded an end to the maltreatment of Itaff and an immediate medical examination of her.

No reply to the complaint has been received yet.
LIST OF DETAINEES
JANUARY — JUNE 1990

The following are the names of the women who were detained in the Russian Compound in the period January to June 1990. The list, which contains the names of 87 women, is not a complete one. For various reasons, WOFPP was not always able to obtain the names of all the women who were detained during this period. According to Israeli law, it is forbidden to publish the names of women detainees who are under the age of 18; they are therefore listed by their initials.

JANUARY
1 S.Sh., 18, from A-Tur (near Jerusalem), student. Arrested on 10 December 1989 on suspicion of throwing stones and empty bottles at a police car. Her trial took place on 4 February 1990 and she was released without punishment or fine.
2 L.F., 18, from Issawiya, student. Arrested on 14 December 1989 near Damascus Gate on her way home from school. She was released on bail the next day.
3 H.M., 18, from Bethlehem. Arrested on 16 December 1989. She was released after 18 days in detention.
4 Hitham Salah, 24, from Jalazoun refugee camp. Arrested on 7 January 1990, released the next day.
5 B.S., 14, from A-Tur. Arrested on 11 January 1990 as she was leaving school. During the arrest, she was beaten all over her body, especially on her back. She was kept all night in the zinzana and released on bail on 12 January.
6 Zeinab Yusef al-Sayyad, 26, from A-Tur. Arrested on 11 January 1990 along with two female relatives, following a clash with soldiers. Released.
8 A.D., 18, from Ramallah. Arrested on 14 January on suspicion of throwing stones at soldiers. She denied the accusation. Was released after 10 days of detention, with neither bail nor trial.
9 M.A., 17, from Salfit. Arrested on 19 January along with her father. They both were ordered to report to the military headquarters where they were arrested. Her father was released, but she was kept in detention. On 1 February she was transferred to Jalame detention center. Released.
10 K.M., 16, from Qalandia refugee camp. Arrested on 21 January. Charged with throwing stones at a military vehicle. Sentenced to seven months in prison.
11 Fadwa Shawar, 20, from al-Bireh, works with the Arab Studies Society. Arrested on 21 January at her home. Released the next day.
12 Samira Farraj, from Nablus.
13 A.Sh., 15, from Qalandia refugee camp, student. Arrested on 22 January on suspicion of throwing stones at a bus. Released on bail of NIS 5,000 on 4 February, after 14 days of detention. She was put under house arrest for 102 days, until 17 May, when her trial was held. She was sentenced to five months in prison, with no deduction for the days of house arrest.
14 H.J., 17, from Bethlehem, student. Arrested on 24 January while leaving school, by a settler who pointed his pistol at her head while he pulled her into his car. She was soon transferred to a police car that took her to the Russian Compound. Released on bail.
15 Fatma Shamayel, from Am‘ari refugee camp, mother of baby. WOFPP was notified of her arrest on 25 January. Released.
16 H.S., 18, from Silwan. Arrested on 30 January and kept in zinzana for eight days. During interrogation, she was beaten with fists all over her body. Her head was covered with a sack and smashed against a wall. Her interrogators pressed down hard on her eyes while they were covered. She was charged with carrying a molotov cocktail and participating in a demonstration. Sentenced to 15 months in prison.

17 Sukayna Jerayeb, 44, from Beit Ijza (near Ramallah). Was released 24 hours after arrest.

FEBRUARY

18 N.D., 16, from Aqab (near Ramallah), student. Arrested on 6 February near her school. Released on bail of NIS 2,500 after six days of detention. She was put under house arrest until 4 July. During this period she suffered a nervous breakdown. A week before her scheduled trial date, her mother went to the court and asked for a postponement because of her daughter’s condition. The judge agreed to postpone the trial for one week. On 4 July she was sentenced to five months in prison for throwing one stone. (The charge sheet originally read “throwing stones”; it was changed to read “one stone”.)

19 Su‘ad Hamdan Manasra, 24, from Bani Na‘im (near Hebron), married. Arrested on 23 February on the bridge to Jordan. Released after five days in detention.

20 S.S., 16, from Shuafat. Arrested on 27 February. She was beaten regularly while in detention. Charged with throwing stones at a car. Sentenced to eight months in prison and 12 months suspended sentence.
